dare run over him. "Why," he exclaims innocertly and with proper personal pride, "I stood right on the track when one of them dummed skypole cars came a-buzzing along, and I thought I'd just see if they'd run over me. They hollered and yelled for me to get off the track, but I didn't budge an inch, for I had as much right there as they had, and they just hauled the thing up stock still afore they got ter me. All a man's got ter do is to stand up for his rights, and them Boston fellers dassn't run over him." And he looked just as if he believed there was no danger.
